LEPER OUTLAW
WAS MARRIED

Takes His Newly Wedded Wife to Molokai as His Kokua.

Opunui Aila, the leper outlaw, who was captured at Hawaii, near Wai-alua, November 25, after having defied the police and health authorities for several years, was married December 1, to his cousin, Jennie Davis. The license was issued by C. Charlock. The ceremony took place at Kalihi, and was performed by S. K. Kaloa, "pastor of the church of reasonable service, and Democratic politician."

One of the conditions that Opunui made before he would consent to go to Molokai was that he should be allowed to marry the woman and that she should go with him to the Settlement as his kokua. She is expected to become a mother shortly.

The matter of sending her to the Settlement as a kokua was approved at the meeting of the Board of Health yesterday.

Kwanno vs. Seisuke Kwanno, the libel-of this court."

Demurrer Filed.

In the assumpsit proceeding of Bessie R. Burns against Julia H. Afong, count, a written document.

CHINESE GAMBLERS
ACCUSE A DETECTIVE

Some of the twenty-seven Chinese arrested in the Joe Leal raid on a Manuakea street gambling joint and fined in police court, say that they paid for protection and should have had it. They claim that the Leal raid was merely spectacular, in spite of which it landed them where they had to disgorge a lot of money. Lum Hoon, the keeper, said he had arranged the raid with Leal for Sunday. The Sheriff, who is investigating the matter, says that Leal asked to pull the place on Sunday, but did not show up, complaining that Kalakiela and Luawihia went there and spoiled the chance. On Thursday Leal asked for another chance, got it, and landed the twenty-seven players. Mr. Leal says that the whole thing is a put up job, the Chinese having made it a policy to so accuse all officers who raid them. In this case there seems to have been a wish to also divert attention from a bigger game.

When You
Are Ready to Buy

Do not imagine that the man with a house to sell will sneer at you for demanding information on all details in advance. The real-estate agent or house-owner will respect you for attacking the question in a thorough, earnest, systematic fashion.

Ascertain why the man from whom you think of purchasing is selling his home. It may be the very reason why you do not wish to buy that house.

Ascertain the source of the water supply and the exact nature of the sewerage or cesspool system. The health of your family will depend upon these two factors.

Haste in real estate is dangerous.
You will always be urged to close a deal at once. Such a bargain will never remain open until the morrow!

Perhaps! Your neighbors, near or distant, will affect the value of your property, to say nothing of your peace of mind.

In a section already built, its social status, its schools, its neighborhoods and its financial values are determined.
Do not buy a home so small that you know within the next few years you will feel it necessary to add a room or two. It is hard to meet payments and carpenter bills simultaneously.

Do not let any specious real-estate agent part you from that hard-earned money by any lightning-like system of argument. The real-estate agent is more interested in his commission than in your future comfort and satisfaction.

Above all things, do not buy in a neighborhood where "for sale" signs are as thick as hops. Buy in a suburb or neighborhood to which families are moving, not from which they are fleeing. Remember that while this most attractive house is to be your home, check full of sentiment, it also represents the investment of your savings.
Buy where land promises to increase in value, not depreciate.

Investigate the title of the land rigidly. Either secure a title guarantee from a reliable concern or have the abstract made by some one to be trusted.

supply, gas and electricity.

This will take time, and all this time the insistent agent will be after you.
Let him stew and fuss. Far better that he should fret now about his commission than that you should fret for years over money hastily invested.
